ECE 1073 ~ Guiding and Understanding Behaviour

Understanding the hows and whys of children's behaviour is a critical skill. This course gives students an understanding of the possible causes of inappropriate behaviour, as well as, an appreciation of how the environment impacts on children's behaviour. The role of the caregiver and teacher in using positive and pro-active methods to help children behave appropriately is a primary focus of the course. Students are introduced to many practical approaches to working positively with young children.

July 12-16

ECE 1013 ~ Human Development: Conception to Age Three

The focus of this course is on the normal social, emotional, physical and cognitive development of infants and toddlers. Much discussion focuses on the influence of environment and genetics on development and also on how professionals can plan developmentally appropriate environments. Other topics examined include risk factors for growth and development as well as emotional and temperament development. Students will be challenged to connect current theory to their practice.
